

This is the story of a man who had no one for himself, he was poor and he had nothing to fill his empty stomach. Even in this miserable condition, he was always righteous. Before doing a thing he always asked himself whether it was righteous or not. He never lied. He had greatest compassion for everyone, even for the people who would treat him in an ill manner. He had a very good heart and was charitable. If any one comes and asks him anything that he has in his possession, he would give it to them without thinking.

We shall look into his character and walks of his life later. We shall see how he was tested through both mental and physical means.

Thank you.
